DIANE DUFOUR
CJC PRESIDENT

Our concours at Little Switzerland last month was a huge success! We had plenty of volunteers, the weather cooperated – for the most part – and the silent auction raised $2701.00 for our annual USO donation. Ron Kuligowski told me that the club has donated over $40,000 to the USO of North Carolina over the years.

I did remember to bring my official CJC name badge. I also remembered to take a group photo on the steps of the lodge on Thursday evening. The photo is included in this newsletter on page 5. If anyone would like a copy of this photo, please contact me.

The August meeting at the Grandover in Greensboro yesterday was well attended – around 40 members – thanks to the partnership of Ron Kuligowski and Peter Shanahan. Ron made the lunch arrangements with the Grandover Resort and Peter organized a wonderful morning to show our cars at the Winston-Salem Cars & Coffee at Reynolda Village Park followed by a drive on the backroads to the Grandover Resort.

Nancy Willis of the membership committee reported that our club has a total of 171 members. We are growing as a club and I was excited to see several new members at the meeting.

The September meeting will take place during the road trip which is Tuesday, September 25 – Saturday, September 29. Details on the trips and all upcoming events can be found in this issue.

I will close with a bon voyage to the club members departing on August 27 for France. Safe travels and look forward to hearing about the trip on your return.

See you soon,

Diane

Lissie and Peter Shanahan

By Harvey Ferris

POSTED BY NEWHILLGARAGE

📅 JULY 19, 2018

Carolina Jaguar Club members Lissie and Peter Shanahan attended their 2nd CJC Concours at Little Switzerland and had quite a successful weekend. Their 2007 XK took first in class honors at the Concours.

I touched base with Peter after the judging to get his back story. Lissie and Peter have been members of the CJC for about a year. This summer is their 2nd season of events. They live in Winston-Salem and are both orchestral musicians. They both play the flute and spend a large portion of their time teaching students of all ages. Peter told me that his interest in the Jaguar XK was kindled about 5 years ago as a result of seeing one featured on the British program Top Gear. The Top Gear episode made him realize that this was an absolutely striking and beautiful car. He looked into the history of Jaguar and was impressed with early cars like the XK-120 and the E-Type. He admitted that the subsequent years of producing big grand touring cars probably would not have inspired him but he loved the lines of the XK. He spent several years researching the market and found the XK of his dreams. Once he had purchased the car, he figured there must be a Jaguar club. He found the CJC website, which put him in touch with Kevin and Nancy Willis, who it turned out lived less than a mile from him. They dropped by his house in another XK and soon enough, they were members.

The Shanahans love their XK. It has a caramel interior with walnut burl. The exterior is Midnight Metallic. Although the car is over 10 years old, our concours judging team found little to fault with the car. It is in immaculate condition.

Peter has involved himself with keeping the car in good condition and is performing routine maintenance items himself. He has found there to be excellent help both on XK related web forums and Youtube videos. He is especially proud of his efforts to avoid having to buy a new $3000 adaptive headlight unit, which had failed on his car. He instead followed advice from Youtube and purchased a used $300 unit and combined the two to make one functional headlight.

Lissie and Peter are justifiably proud of their XK. It is in great condition and is fun to drive. They are looking forward to next year's Concours at Little Switzerland.

Ferman's Story

BY Ferman Wardell

Ever since a fraternity brother showed up at NC State in 1962 with a dark blue Jaguar E-type FHC, I have wanted an E-type. My first foray into actually getting one began some 54 years later in 2016. It happened on eBay. I've bought and sold almost 200 items on eBay without a problem, so I figured that would be a reasonable source to start. There it was - a Willow Green 1968 Series 2 with a tan interior. The photos and description were alluring. It had recently been restored. Well, I won the bid at around $30,000 - fine. I clicked on the link "Pay Now" and followed the seller's instructions to wire the money to a bank account in Pittsburgh PA. The seller acknowledged receipt of my money and provided the mobile number of his transporter, who negotiated a satisfactory shipping price and schedule. I was to pay him upon receipt of the Jag.

My new Jag would arrive Tuesday by Noon. I flew home from the beach early to be there. All Tuesday morning I ran to look out front as I heard every truck drive up the street. Of course, it was garbage pickup day, and there were a number of them. By that afternoon, there was no sign of my Jag. In response to my text the transporter reported that the truck was in Virginia but delayed because of "election traffic." It was election day, and this didn't make much sense, but I accepted it, and they would arrive Wednesday. That didn't happen, and I lost contact with the transporter and seller.

Naturally, I began to really worry. Meanwhile, a used car dealer in Jacksonville FL e-mailed to congratulate me on winning "their" E-type on eBay. Telling them I had already paid the seller, they said that I had paid the wrong person. When I tried to schedule a trip to Jacksonville to see and drive the car, they suddenly became silent. I had that heavy sinking feeling!

Calling eBay, I learned they had a $50,000 guarantee in situations like this, if one went through eBay on all communications with the seller. After checking the auction history, they informed me that I qualified to take my case to their auction insurance company. This very nice woman advised that I needed to try to get my bank to recall the money (too late of course), file police reports in Charlotte (my home city), Pittsburgh (seller's bank), and San Diego (shipper's alleged city), and file an FBI report for interstate internet fraud. I did this quickly and provided copies to the insurance company.

A few weeks later, I received an e-mail from the insurance company to sign a release form to receive a reimbursement check - yay! Being out of the country, it took me several days to respond. When I did, a call from them informed me that I had already responded with the signed form for them to wire the money to a bank account. That sinking feeling returned! It was from my e-mail address but it wasn't me, I said. My e-mail account had been hijacked! Fortunately, they do not wire money but always send checks to the recipient's address, which finally did happen!

Then, with money in the bank and being much wiser, I continued my search. To make a long story short, I found a lovely light blue 1971 Series 3 2+2 FHC V-12 in San Diego. This time, however, I took a trip to see the owner and drive the car, unlike the big mistake I made in the first go-round. My new E-type is terrific - with some work it scored a 97.8/100 in its first CJC concours in July 2017 and a 99.25/100, both in the Championship Division, in the recent 2018 concours.

Finally, I called the insurance company to see if the perpetrators were caught. They wouldn't say directly, but did let me know that they definitely push hard for convictions. This story had a happy ending, and the lesson learned is obvious. Hopefully my experience will benefit others. I am so glad this is history!

Tiny Tech Tip

By John Stewart

My five Essential Nonessential Tools

If you are into cars, it almost goes without saying, you are also into tools. I have a garage full. Everybody knows you must have the basics (socket set, combination wrenches, and assortments of screw drivers and pliers), however, over the course of a life time I have acquired a pretty eclectic set of other tools. Some of these I have never used and can't remember why I bought them and some of them were bought for a specific job and never used again. However, some of these (though a bit quirky) I use frequently and would find it hard to live without them.

As many of you know, I volunteer with a nonprofit that accepts donated cars and the ones we can save are repaired and go to people in desperate need of transportation. We have a well-equipped shop, but with a dozen or so volunteer mechanics, tools get lost or misplaced. As a result, I bring in a bag of my essential tools. Most, though not all, of the tools described below are in that bag.

1. 3/8 in. drive, 18 inch breaker bar (less than $20). Every car that comes into the Wheels4Hope shop goes through a complete inspection covering an eleven page checklist. A thorough brake inspection is on the list. Calipers are removed to measure pad and rotor thickness and look for any leaks. The specified torque for caliper bolts is usually somewhere between 20 and 30 ft-lbs. (not much more than hand tightened). However, on most of the cars I have worked on, you would think Arnold Schwarzenegger, in his prime, had put his back into tightening the bolts. Going after a very tight bolt by putting all you weight and muscle on a six in ratchet handle is a sure recipe for a slipped wrench, rounded bolt head, cracked knuckles, a hernia or possibly all four. A long breaker bar lets you apply smooth controlled force with minimal effort. (A bonus tip: If you can make it work, and sometimes the angles won't let you, use 6 point instead of 12 point sockets. You have much more contact area on the bolt head so less chance of rounding the head.

2. Trim and molding tools. (About $10). When working in the interior to replace light bulb, switches, window regulators etc., you often have to remove plastic, wood, or upholstered trim pieces. These are often "snapped" on rather than attached with screws or bolts. When you want to pry something off, the first instinct is to grab a screw driver. Don't! A cheap set of nylon trim tools can get the job done with much less chances of scratching or breaking the trim pieces.

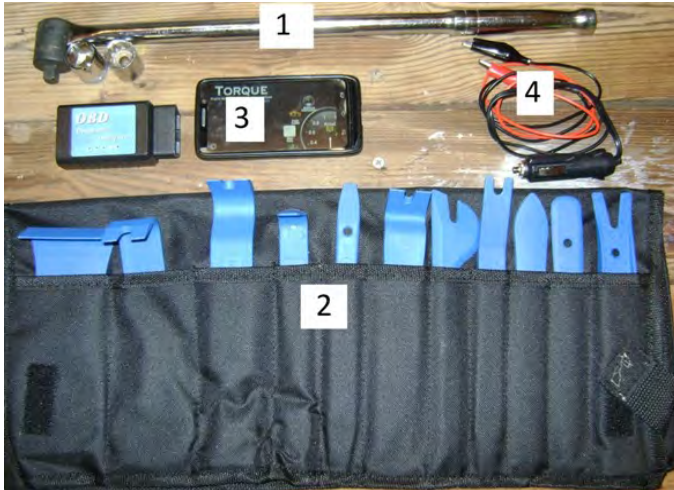

3. Smart phone (or tablet), Bluetooth OBD-II dongle, scanning software (If you have a smart phone or tablet, $25). Cars manufacture from 1996 on, have a port that allows you to plug in a diagnostic scanner. Simply put, when the check engine light goes on, an OBD-II scanner (On Board Diagnostics) can talk to the car's computer and tell you what is wrong. Often it is an easy fix like replacing a faulty sensor. The codes are fairly standard, though different makes may have their own special codes. (Usually you can't find out what they are. They want you to go to the dealer.) A dedicated OBD-II scanner can cost $50 to several hundred dollars. However, if you have a cell phone or tablet with Bluetooth, you can buy a cheap device that plugs into the OBD-II port and transmits the codes to you phone or tablet. There are a number of Apps that let you read the codes. I use a program call "Torque." The full version from the Android App Store is $4.95. It not only reads the codes, but has some other features that are very useful and will be used in a future Tiny Tech Tips.

4. 12 volt power source for testing (free if you have an old auto phone charging cable, a little time and have a "jump box.") It is often easier to test electrical components like switches, bulbs, motors, relays, etc. out of the car. To test them, you may need a power source. I took an old car phone charging cable and put alligator clips on the positive and negative wires. My jump box has standard automotive socket and I can just plug my hand made cable in and have a reliable 12 volt power source to use when testing individual components. For some applications you will also need a multimeter but doesn't everyone already have one of those? If you don't, you can get an adequate one for under $50. Get a meter that will measure at least 10 amps of current; 20 amps is better.

5. An internet Connected computer (Free, I just moved one to the garage). The single most used tool at the Wheels4Hope is the shop computer. Want to know how to replace the window regulator in a 2004 Mazda 3 (or know why the side mirror on your XK8 exploded)?

Just Google the problem and you would be amazed at what you find. As strange as it seems, somebody has made a YouTube video or forum post) for almost any problem or repair you can imagine (<https://www.jaguarforums.com> has a wealth of information for all models of Jaguar). Five minutes watching some of these videos or reading a post can save you hours of figuring out how things come apart and how to put them back together. I was able to find a pdf version of the full Jaguar service manual for my XK8 which is loaded on my garage computer. An added bonus is a set of speakers so I can play all my 60's music while I work. Please remember that it is caveat emptor on the internet so consider the source before you follow the advice.

I'd love to hear about your favorite nonessential tools. I'm always in the market for new tools.

Vehicle registrations are still open but will close October 1st. If you are thinking about registering, please do that soon. If you know of someone who might be interested but has never been to EURO, feel free to forward this e-mail on to them. A lot of car clubs will get groups together to participate in the show. We would love to have you and your vehicle at the show this year!

Motorcycles are welcome at the show as well. We had a great turnout last year and hoping to build on that this year.

Vehicle registration this year is only $50 and that includes you and a guest attending the show on Saturday, October 20. There are other options you can add on to your registration this year but the base price is only $50.

Please contact me if you have any questions.

Classified (continued)For sale: 1992 XJ Majestic (Rare)

Apart from being a 26 year old car with the usual minor scratch and ding here and there it is otherwise an immaculate and a very rare Jaguar, which as you know was sold as a Daimler in the rest of the world. The XJ40 Majestic was only imported into the USA for model years 1991 and 1992 and in two special colors only, the 1992 was in Regency Red Mica with a cream interior and Mesh Wheels with a body colored high light. The 1992 was fit with Roulette Wheels painted gold, not a good choice by Jaguar, but hey they were standard. New set of Michelins all around, replaced the plug wires with an 8mm set of blue Magnecors, new NKG plugs, new rotor and distributor cap, 20w50 Castrol oil and Mann filter, transmission oil and filter changed, new stabilizer trunk shocks, a new radio antenna grommet and a brand new Nardi classic wood steering wheel. Asking $6250.00.
